How a Foal Came to Be Named "Rhoads Six"

A cancer ward and race horse that share the same name provide hope to patients newly diagnosed with acute myeloid leukemia

From a very early age, Teresa Garofalo has been around horses. She developed a love for animals while growing up in Vermont and Tennessee. Becoming a veterinarian and horse breeder were her lifelong goals.

Teresa built a successful veterinary practice and, along with her husband John, tended to the horses that live on their picturesque West Chester farm. Life was good. But, in May 2007, Teresa began feeling unusually tired, and noticed fluid was building in one of her knees. After a battery of tests, Teresa was diagnosed with acute myeloid leukemia and was immediately admitted for treatment. The news came as a shock to her and John, but as any cancer patient and their family know, there is never a "good" time for a cancer diagnosis.

The Garofalos turned to Penn's Abramson Cancer Center for her care. A few days after being admitted to Rhoads 6, while Teresa was receiving her second dose of chemotherapy, she watched a live camera feed of their farm with excited anticipation. As nurses looked on with curiosity, Teresa coached her husband John through birthing the newest addition to their family, a beautiful foal. They named the foal Rhoads Six after the floor where Teresa was being treated at the hospital of the University of Pennsylvania. Rhoads Six, affectionately called "Rhoady," is now old enough to race, and recently traveled to Maryland for six months of training.

Rhoady will be racing for the Rhoads Six Foundation, which aims to provide Rhoads Six patients with items that will make their experience easier. Rhoady's winnings and additional outside donations will support this effort.

Teresa and John Garofalo want to make life a little easier for future patients with acute myeloid leukemia.

After a challenging treatment regimen that included a bone marrow transplant, Teresa is now in remission and feeling more like herself again. Teresa says, "We are so grateful for the wonderful care I received at Penn, and particularly thankful to the entire staff of Rhoads 6 and Rhoads 7 for their compassion and attention during my extended stays. We want to give back to say thank you to the staff, but also to try and make life a little easier for the other patients going through what I did."

All of us are wishing Rhoady the best of luck in his races, especially since Teresa and John will be donating a percentage of his winnings to a recently created foundation benefiting patients diagnosed with acute myeloid leukemia at the Abramson Cancer Center. The Rhoads Six Foundation will help provide items for patients and their families that are intended to make a difficult situation a little more bearable. Laptop computers for patients to use during their stay, DVD players, softer bedding, and parking vouchers for patients and their visitors are just a few ways that Teresa and John hope Rhoady's winnings and additional outside donations will be used.
